As part of its continuing efforts to attract skilled job candidates to the state workforce and transparency and accountability to taxpayers, the Louisiana Department of State Civil Service has launched a mobile version of its website that will allow job candidates quicker access to job seeker resources and current job openings. In addition, the mobile website will allow the public quicker access to key information regarding the State's Civil Service System.

"People are increasingly using mobile devices to access the internet and SCS's mobile website will enable more users to quickly access information regarding current job announcements and publications regarding the state's workforce which enhances the ability to promote accountability and help improve government performance," said Shannon Templet, Director of State Civil Service. "This initiative will benefit job seekers, current employees and taxpayers."

SCS's mobile website is intended to meet the needs of the job seeker and the citizens of Louisiana. Templet adds "We are excited to provide a direct link to our YouTube channel that features realistic job preview videos and announcements." The videos have been very beneficial in providing job applicants with a view of a government job prior to applying, and provide an avenue to showcase dedicated state employees and the vital role they serve in providing services to the citizens.

The mobile website's content is organized under five main tabs. The first allows users to view job seeker resources such as testing requirements, schedules and locations; the second provides users with the State's job search; the third provides a number of publications, facts and figures; the fourth provides information on the State Civil Service Commission such as public meeting schedules, agendas and minutes; lastly a section that contains State Civil Service Rules.

The mobile version of SCS's website is automatically opened by visiting the same URL as SCS's regular website, www.civilservice.la.gov, via a mobile device.
